January Poem

this morning the lake
is making smoke

not real smoke

only water
meeting air so cold
it has to show itself

a few gulls stand
on the harbor ice

each one balanced
on its own small island
of hunger

the benches wear snow
on their shoulders

and under one of them
a mitten lies palm up

as if someone
had reached down

to touch the cold

and left a hand behind

Copyright Scott Simpson, All Rights Reserved